
Contents

Foreword	ix
Michela BERETTA
Author Biographies	xiii
Introduction	xvii
Émilie RUIZ
Chapter 1. Managing Openness with Multisided Platforms	1
Guy PARMENTIER
1.1. Multisided platforms	2
1.2. Strategy of openness	4
1.3. Control tools and mechanisms.	7
1.4. Effect on user and company creativity	9
1.5. Conclusion	12
1.6. References	14
Chapter 2. Capabilities to Benefit from Crowdsourcing for Innovation	17
Émilie RUIZ
2.1. Crowdsourcing (CS) of creative activities: a form of crowdsourcing for innovation.	19
2.2. Benefits and difficulties that question organizational boundaries	21
2.3. Capacities to benefit from CS for creative activities.	26
2.4. Conclusion	31
2.5. References	32

Chapter 3. The Role of Creative Capabilities in Opening up the Business Model Innovation Process	37
Romain GANDIA
3.1. The business model (BM) innovation process and dynamics of openness.	39
3.2. Understanding the dynamic of openness in the BM innovation process through the lens of organizational creative capability (OCC)	43
3.3. The Ankama case: an atypical OCC model to organize a dynamic of internal and external openness in the BM innovation process	47
3.4. The Airbnb case: a digital OCC co-production model to organize the openness of the BM’s innovation process.	51
3.5. Differing perspectives on Ankama and Airbnb’s OCC models: What lessons can be learned?	55
3.6. Conclusion	58
3.7. References	59
Chapter 4. The Liberated Company: Openness, a Complementary Dimension to Explore Creative Capabilities	65
Sandra DUBOULOZ and Caroline MATTELIN-PIERRARD
4.1. The liberated company: a fertile ground for creativity?	67
4.1.1. Liberated companies and organizational creativity	68
4.1.2. Liberated companies and individual and collective creativity.	69
4.2. The liberated company and creativity: openness, a new dimension to explore	73
4.2.1. Openness and creativity	73
4.2.2. Liberated companies and multi-level creative capabilities.	75
4.2.3. An executive management team open to new experiences and to the involvement of all employers in the creativity and innovation process	75
4.2.4. An internal openness conducive to creativity	77
4.2.5. An external openness conducive to creativity	79
4.3. The multidimensional model of the creative capabilities of the liberated company	82
4.4. Conclusion	85
4.5. References	85
Chapter 5. The Third Place to Develop Creative Capabilities	91
Aurore DANDOY
5.1. The genealogy of the concept of “third places”.	91
5.2. Creating a third place rather than being a third place	93

5.3. Defining the third place through territorial and emotional anchoring	94
5.4. Sceaux Smart, community and territory before place	95
5.5. The creative capabilities of a third place: a multidimensional web	98
5.6. The regulation of third places: between authority, legitimacy and creative empowerment	100
5.7. Third places to strengthen individual creative capabilities	101
5.8. Third places to strengthen organizational creative capabilities.	102
5.9. Third places to strengthen creative civic and political capabilities	104
5.10. An image to summarize.	105
5.11. Conclusion	106
5.12. References.	107
Chapter 6. Large-Scale Research Infrastructures and the Pharmaceutical Industry: Partnerships and Creative Capabilities	111
Nuria MORATAL
6.1. Introduction.	111
6.2. Collaboration and creativity in scientific practice	113
6.3. The case of a partnership around a large database	114
6.3.1. The need to increase skills	116
6.3.2. Increasingly demanding needs	118
6.3.3. Increasingly intense exchanges.	120
6.3.4. Pre-competitive collaborations	122
6.4. Discussion: the impact on creative capabilities.	124
6.4.1. Regular interactions and specialized training to ensure the transfer of skills	126
6.4.2. Collaborative projects to go beyond the transfer of skills	127
6.5. Conclusion	129
6.6. References	129
Chapter 7. The Recording Industry: Relying on Openness to Enrich Musical Creativity	133
Margaux VALES
7.1. Creative capabilities and artistic creation	135
7.1.1. Le Confort Moderne: generating and enriching a creative idea.	136
7.1.2. La Salle Gueule: organizing ordinary creativity	138
7.2. Creative capabilities and production	140
7.2.1. Maloka: evaluating groups to produce	141
7.2.2. Les Acteurs de l’Ombre: creating the exceptional.	144

7.3. Creative capabilities and distribution.	146
7.3.1. Believe: opening up distribution tools.	146
7.3.2. Universal: integrating industry trends	148
7.4. Conclusion	149
7.5. References	151
Chapter 8. Innovating with an Online Community: The Yoomaneo and EDF Pulse and You Cases.	153
Zoé MASSON and Guy PARMENTIER
8.1. Context and description of Yoomaneo and EDF Pulse and You.	155
8.1.1. The context in which the Yoomaneo community was created.	155
8.1.2. The Yoomaneo community	156
8.1.3. The context in which EDF Pulse and You was created.	159
8.1.4. The EDF Pulse and You community	159
8.2. Managing an online innovation community (OIC): organization, communication and platform building	162
8.2.1. What are the organization strategies?	162
8.2.2. What are the communication strategies?	165
8.2.3. Platform-specific features	166
8.3. OIC members.	168
8.4. The benefits of OIC for companies and participants.	169
8.4.1. Transversality: what are the roles and contributions of the various players working with OIC?.	170
8.4.2. Results generated by OIC	174
8.5. The issues and challenges of OICs	178
8.5.1. Issues related to community members.	178
8.5.2. Confidentiality issues	179
8.5.3. Challenges related to the competitive environment	179
8.6. Conclusion	181
8.7. References	184
Conclusion.	185
Émilie RUIZ
List of Authors	193
Index	195