Preface . . . . .	xvii
Cerisy Symposiums. Selection of Publications . . . . .	xxi
Introduction . . . . .	xxv
Part 1. Exploration and the Extreme . . . . .	1
Section 1. The Logic of Exploration . . . . .	3
Chapter 1. An Exemplary Exploration Story: Nansen’s Expedition to the North Pole . . . . .	5
Pascal LIÈVRE
1.1. Introduction. . . . .	5
1.2. A project that makes “sense” because it is consistent with an identity-based learning trajectory. . . . .	7
1.3. A radical dual ambidextrous capacity . . . . .	9
1.3.1. Planning . . . . .	10
1.3.2. Adaptation . . . . .	11
1.3.3. Exploration . . . . .	12
1.3.4. Exploitation . . . . .	12
1.4. A dynamic of knowledge expansion in terms of an epistemic community . . . . .	13
1.4.1. The Intention . . . . .	14
1.4.2. The spark. . . . .	15
1.4.3. The manifesto . . . . .	15
1.4.4. Various experts who formed a community around the project . . . .	15
1.4.5. A continuous increase in implementing knowledge. . . . .	16

1.5. Conclusion . . . . .	16
1.6. References . . . . .	17
Chapter 2. Project Management in Extreme Situations: The Manhattan Case . . . . .	21
Sylvain LENFLE
2.1. Introduction. . . . .	21
2.2. The origins of the Manhattan project. . . . .	22
2.3. Exploring the unknown. . . . .	23
2.4. The Manhattan Project organization . . . . .	26
2.5. Project management as sensemaking. . . . .	29
2.6. The expansive legacy of the Manhattan project and the limit of the metaphor . . . . .	32
2.7. References . . . . .	34
Section 2. Exploration Testimonies . . . . .	37
Chapter 3. Exploration, the Common Theme of a Training System on Innovation . . . . .	39
Bruno STÉVENIN and Éric DÉPRAETERE
3.1. The initial context at the origin of the adventure . . . . .	39
3.2. The launch and preparation of the training program characteristic of exploration . . . . .	40
3.3. The heart of program design: a step-by-step exploration . . . . .	42
3.4. The transition to exploitation . . . . .	49
3.5. Conclusion . . . . .	52
3.6. 2017, Toward future explorations. . . . .	53
3.7. References . . . . .	53
Chapter 4. A New Progress Technique in the Himalayas . . . . .	55
Paulo GROBEL
4.1. Introduction. . . . .	55
4.2. The Himalayan technique, a reference . . . . .	55
4.3. The emergence of new strategies . . . . .	56
4.4. But also, listening to the doctors' recommendations... . . . .	57
4.5. "Doing it together" . . . . .	57
4.6. Snail strategy, gentle progression, slow expedition, continuous progression? . . . . .	58
4.6.1. Toward a name change . . . . .	58
4.6.2. We have therefore named our strategy "progression douce" (gentle progression) . . . . .	59
4.6.3. The gentle progression has become "the snail's strategy" . . . . .	59

4.6.4. The snail strategy has been transformed into a slow expedition . . .	60
4.6.5. Slow expedition now becomes continuous progress . . . . .	60
4.7. Not to conclude..... . . . .	60
Section 3. Toward an Extreme Ethnography . . . . .	63
Chapter 5. Some Methodological Considerations in Relation to the Objects Involved . . . . .	65
Mondher KILANI
Chapter 6. Ethnography of the Extreme: Epistemological and Methodological Issues of the Use of Video . . . . .	75
Géraldine RIX-LIÈVRE
6.1. Introduction. . . . .	75
6.2. An involved and involving ethnography. . . . .	77
6.3. Interests and limitations of the use of video in the production of materials. . . . .	79
6.4. Video, a modality of ethnographic writing . . . . .	81
6.5. Video, for an ethnography of activity . . . . .	83
6.6. References . . . . .	88
Part 2. Creativity and Organizational Reliability . . . . .	91
Section 4. Organizational Creativity . . . . .	93
Chapter 7. Management of a Crisis Situation in a Large Video Game Studio . . . . .	95
Patrick COHENDET and Laurent SIMON
7.1. Introduction. . . . .	95
7.2. A creativity crisis at Ubisoft's studio. . . . .	96
7.3. Management of a major crisis . . . . .	99
7.3.1. Bisociation. . . . .	99
7.3.2. The recomposition of routines by a sequence of bisociations . . . .	101
7.4. Conclusion . . . . .	103
7.5. References . . . . .	103
Chapter 8. Organizing Innovative Design or How to Remain an Explorer: The Case of Creaholic . . . . .	105
Gilles GAREL
8.1. Introduction. . . . .	105
8.2. Innovative design and ambidexterity . . . . .	106
8.2.1. Forms of ambidexterity . . . . .	107
8.2.2. Ambidextrous relationships. . . . .	109

8.3. The case of Creaholic, an innovative design company . . . . .	110
8.3.1. Creaholic, an IDE that produces repeated innovation. . . . .	110
8.3.2. A relevant governance structure . . . . .	112
8.4. Discussion and conclusion: the IDE and a return to exploitation . . . . .	116
8.5. References . . . . .	119
Section 5. Creativity under Constraint . . . . .	121
Chapter 9. Creativity under Constraint: A Management Sciences Perspective . . . . .	123
Guy PARMENTIER
9.1. Introduction. . . . .	123
9.2. The different types of constraints and their actions . . . . .	124
9.3. Internal design and cognitive constraints . . . . .	125
9.4. Situational time and resource constraints . . . . .	127
9.5. Border constraints . . . . .	129
9.6. The construction of the sense of constraints. . . . .	130
9.7. Organizational climate . . . . .	131
9.8. Conclusion . . . . .	133
9.9. References . . . . .	133
Chapter 10. Creativity for Extreme Situations . . . . .	139
Samira BOURGEOIS-BOUGRINE and Todd LUBART
10.1. Introduction . . . . .	139
10.2. Introduction to creativity . . . . .	140
10.2.1. Definition of creativity . . . . .	140
10.2.2. Creative processes. . . . .	141
10.3. Creativity and risk management . . . . .	143
10.3.1. Creativity, insight and intuition when making decisions in extreme situations. . . . .	144
10.3.2. Creativity and daily risk management . . . . .	147
10.4. Creativity for anticipating extreme situations . . . . .	148
10.4.1. What can we learn from fiction writers? . . . . .	149
10.4.2. Co-creativity in a virtual environment . . . . .	151
10.5. Conclusion . . . . .	153
10.6. References. . . . .	154
Section 6. Organizational Reliability . . . . .	159
Chapter 11. Scope and Limits of Extreme Situations for Highly Reliable Organizations: A Pragmatic Interpretation . . . . .	161
Benoît JOURNÉ
11.1. Introduction . . . . .	161

11.2. The growing interest in extreme situations. . . . .	161
11.3. The pragmatist approach to situations . . . . .	162
11.4. HROs: keeping extreme situations under control. . . . .	163
11.5. The mutual influence of situations and organization: between normality and extremity. . . . .	164
11.6. Extremity traps and extreme situations . . . . .	165
11.7. Conditions for a contribution of extreme situations to the knowledge of situations and organizations . . . . .	166
11.8. References. . . . .	167
Chapter 12. Error in Decision-Making Processes in Operational Situations: The Case of Fire Rescue Organizations . . . . .	169
Anaïs GAUTIER
12.1. Introduction . . . . .	169
12.2. The study of ordinary situations in codified activities for decision making. . . . .	170
12.2.1. Extreme and unique contexts of at-risk organizations. . . . .	170
12.2.2. Situation awareness theory to understand the cognitive process of actors . . . . .	171
12.2.3. Reasoning error for a cognitive approach . . . . .	171
12.3. Action-research methodology for analyzing decision making in situations . . . . .	172
12.4. The case of the organization of rescue operations in forest firefighting operations: the management of cross-border operations. . . . .	174
12.4.1. Definition of the extreme context of the forest firefighting operation. . . . .	174
12.4.2. Application of situation awareness theory to the identification of the decision-making process . . . . .	175
12.5. Perception of error as a practice for learning . . . . .	177
12.6. References. . . . .	178
Part 3. Register of the Intelligibility of Extreme Management Situations . . . . .	181
Section 7. Meaning and Sensemaking . . . . .	183
Chapter 13. Going to Extreme Situations: What Meaning Should be Given to Such a Project? . . . . .	185
Jean-Pierre BOUTINET
13.1. Introduction . . . . .	185
13.2. Why go on a journey or an expedition? . . . . .	186
13.3. The unavoidable concern of the quest for meaning. . . . .	187

13.4. The project approach that generates meaning . . . . .	188
13.5. The meaning of a project for its stakeholders: author and actors . . . .	190
13.6. The uncertainties linked to the project when thinking about extreme situations . . . . .	192
13.7. What meaning should be given to the willingness to undertake the project? . . . . .	193
13.7.1. Where can we go? . . . . .	193
13.7.2. Why leave? . . . . .	194
13.7.3. What significant opportunities dictate the current situation? . . . .	195
13.7.4. How does my current questioning resonate with my personal history? . . . . .	196
13.7.5. Whom to carry out a project with? . . . . .	197
13.8. To start a project, the art of steering a boat . . . . .	198
13.9. References. . . . .	200
Chapter 14. Sense, Sensitivity and Competence . . . . .	201
Michel RÉCOPÉ
14.1. Introduction . . . . .	201
14.2. Norms, actions and cognitive activity . . . . .	202
14.3. Meaning or sense? . . . . .	203
14.4. Proposal for “common sense” . . . . .	204
14.5. “Sensitivity to” and practical rationality . . . . .	206
14.6. “Sensitivity to” and structured activity . . . . .	208
14.7. “Sensitivity to” and competence. . . . .	210
14.8. What about extreme situations according to this approach? . . . . .	210
14.9. References. . . . .	211
Chapter 15. A Sea Kayaker’s Identity Route and Learning Experience in the Arctic . . . . .	215
Pascal CROSET
15.1. Genesis. . . . .	215
15.2. 2007: the initiation . . . . .	216
15.3. 2008: the road to autonomy . . . . .	216
15.4. 2009: fraternity . . . . .	218
15.5. 2010: learning about limits, and the need for sharing . . . . .	219
15.6. 2011: the discovery of a new territory . . . . .	220
15.7. 2012: teaming up with a (nearly) unknown person . . . . .	221
15.8. 2013: filiation (1). . . . .	222
15.9. 2014: the parallel world . . . . .	223
15.10. 2015: filiation (2). . . . .	224
15.11. 2016: filiation (3) between adults . . . . .	225
15.12. 2017: serenity and satisfaction . . . . .	225

15.13. Knowledge and self-improvement, more than an identity journey . .	226
15.14. Putting everything into perspective . . . . .	227
15.15. Conclusion. . . . .	228
Section 8. Organizational Ambidexterity . . . . .	229
Chapter 16. Organizational Ambidexterity: The Double Organic Ambidexterity . . . . .	231
Monique AUBRY
16.1. Summary . . . . .	231
16.2. Double ambidexterity: an essential skill of the project manager . . . .	232
16.3. From polar expedition to organizational change . . . . .	232
16.4. Methodological aspects . . . . .	234
16.5. Identifying mode changes: transitions . . . . .	234
16.5.1. Case A . . . . .	235
16.5.2. Case B. . . . .	235
16.5.3. Case C. . . . .	235
16.6. Organic ambidexterity as a meta-competency. . . . .	236
16.7. Conclusion . . . . .	237
16.8. Acknowledgments . . . . .	238
16.9. Appendix: changes in mode of action in all three cases . . . . .	239
16.10. References. . . . .	240
Chapter 17. Radical Change in an Extreme Context: Mountaineers Conquering the Darwin Cordillera in Patagonia . . . . .	243
Geneviève MUSCA
17.1 Introduction . . . . .	243
17.2. The episode of radical change . . . . .	244
17.3. Implementation of a radical change in an extreme context . . . . .	246
17.4. Methodology . . . . .	247
17.5. The implementation of radical change: from boat to bags. . . . .	248
17.6. References. . . . .	250
Section 9. The Expansion of Knowledge . . . . .	253
Chapter 18. A Knowledge Corpus and Innovation . . . . .	255
Jean-Louis ERMINE and Pierre SAULAIS
18.1. Creativity is not only based on imagination . . . . .	255
18.2. The use of existing knowledge to improve creativity . . . . .	258
18.3. Case study: a creative process based on knowledge in Thales Air Systems . . . . .	260

18.3.1. The creative environment . . . . .	260
18.3.2. The creative process based on knowledge. . . . .	263
18.4. Lessons learned and conditions for success . . . . .	267
18.5. Appendix . . . . .	268
18.6. References. . . . .	270

Chapter 19. Community of Practice, Variation of Knowledge and Change in Extreme Management Situations. . . . . 273

Jean-Philippe BOOTZ and Olivier DUPOUËT

19.1. Introduction . . . . .	273
19.2 Emerging change and knowledge variation through spontaneous CoPs. . . . .	274
19.2.1. Change as an emerging process. . . . .	274
19.2.2. CoPs as a mechanism for developing and modifying practices . .	275
19.3. Change leads to constellations of communities . . . . .	276
19.3.1. Knowledge variation and change within communities of practice . . . . .	276
19.3.2. Propagation and combinations of variations in a constellation of communities . . . . .	277
19.4. Induced change, knowledge expansion and pilot communities of practice . . . . .	279
19.4.1. Leading change through managed communities of practice: a tension of self-organization/control . . . . .	280
19.4.2. PCoPs and knowledge expansion: exploration and exploitation. .	282
19.5. Conclusion . . . . .	285
19.6. References. . . . .	285

Chapter 20. Expanding Knowledge and Mobilizing Social Networks . . . . . 289

Marc LECOUTRE

20.1. Introduction . . . . .	289
20.2. Innovation, network and knowledge expansion. . . . .	290
20.3. Expanding knowledge: two examples in uncertain and risky situations	290
20.3.1. An example of the acquisition of scientific knowledge during the preparation for a polar expedition . . . . .	291
20.3.2. An example of experiential learning: the crossing of Spitsbergen by a team of young students with little experience . . . . .	291
20.4. The contributions of the two streams of research in social network theory . . . . .	292
20.4.1. The approach by distinguishing ties according to their strength (Granovetter 1973). . . . .	292
20.4.2. The structural approach . . . . .	294

20.5. Feedback and questions on these approaches . . . . .	295
20.5.1. First question: the nature of the tie . . . . .	295
20.5.2. Second question: the nature of knowledge . . . . .	296
20.5.3. Third question: the nature of the process . . . . .	297
20.6. The question of the nature of ties the notion of a “potentially strong” weak tie . . . . .	298
20.7. Conclusion: relational network and process of knowledge expansion . . . . .	300
20.8. References. . . . .	301
Chapter 21. The Crowd and the Expansion of Knowledge . . . . .	305
Claude GUITTARD and Éric SCHENK
21.1. Introduction . . . . .	305
21.2. The crowds and knowledge. . . . .	306
21.2.1. The crowd, the company and the market . . . . .	306
21.2.2. The factors of crowd irrationality. . . . .	306
21.3. Crowds and the media. . . . .	309
21.4. The new visions of the crowd . . . . .	310
21.5. Internet: towards a wise crowd? . . . . .	311
21.6. Crowds and knowledge expansion: crowdsourcing . . . . .	312
21.6.1. The different types of crowdsourcing . . . . .	312
21.6.2. Crowdsourcing and knowledge expansion . . . . .	317
21.7. Conclusion . . . . .	319
21.8. References. . . . .	320
Part 4 . The Variety of Extreme Situations and Disciplinary Perspectives . . . . .	323
Section 10. The Variety of Extreme Situations . . . . .	325
Chapter 22. The Routines of Creation: From Artistic Direction to Collective Exploration . . . . .	327
David MASSÉ
22.1. Introduction . . . . .	327
22.2. Three training schemes in the creative industries. . . . .	328
22.2.1. Guy Laliberté and the transformation of athletes into artists at Cirque du Soleil . . . . .	328
22.2.2. Serge Hascoët and game design training at Ubisoft . . . . .	329
22.2.3. Bartabas and the Académie du spectacle équestre de Versailles . . . . .	329
22.3. The routines of creation: from artistic direction to the collective exploration of talents. . . . .	330
22.3.1. Macro-routines: the “direction” links given by the creator. . . . .	331
22.3.2. Micro-routines: exploration spaces for talent. . . . .	333

22.4. Conclusion . . . . .	335
22.4.1. Trick 1: highlighting practice in transmission . . . . .	336
22.4.2. Trick 2: fostering accommodation through the reduction of feedback . . . . .	336
22.4.3. Trick 3: creating an environment conducive to uncertainty . . . . .	337
22.5. References. . . . .	337
Chapter 23. The Young Researcher Program for Extreme Situations . . . . .	339
Christelle BARON, Emmanuel BONNET, Stéphane CELLIER-COURTIL, Nicolas LAROCHE and Isabelle MAGNE
23.1. Introduction . . . . .	339
23.2. What is a power that promotes the emergence of potential action among actors in situations of uncertainty? . . . . .	340
23.3. The terms of engagement and the processes for regulating collective action in the context of the liberated company: the case of Crédit Agricole Centre Loire . . . . .	341
23.4. The rules of the game of an epistemic community . . . . .	342
23.5. Constructing action knowledge for a wealth management advisor. . . . .	343
23.6. Rethinking logistics from knowledge flows . . . . .	344
23.7. Conclusion . . . . .	345
23.8. References. . . . .	346
Section 11. Disciplinary Perspectives . . . . .	351
Chapter 24. Knowledge Transfer and Learning in Extreme Situations: The Psychologist's Vision . . . . .	353
Jean-Claude COULET
24.1. Introduction . . . . .	353
24.2. Knowledge transfer: a questionable notion . . . . .	354
24.2.1. The notions of knowledge . . . . .	354
24.2.2. The development of knowledge. . . . .	355
24.3. Learning: theoretical considerations . . . . .	357
24.3.1. A modeling of skills . . . . .	357
24.3.2. Forms of learning . . . . .	359
24.4. Collective skills, learning and strategic management . . . . .	360
24.4.1. Knowledge in practice . . . . .	360
24.4.2. The hierarchy of skills . . . . .	361
24.4.3. The articulation between individual and collective skills. . . . .	361
24.5. Conclusion . . . . .	363
24.6. References. . . . .	364

Chapter 25. Expeditions as a Legitimate Object in Management Sciences . . . . .	367
Linda ROULEAU
25.1. Introduction . . . . .	367
25.2. Expeditions as “legitimate objects”? . . . . .	368
25.3 Generalization, rigor and relevance in articles in peer-reviewed journals dealing with expeditions . . . . .	370
25.4. Challenges of producing “legitimate” knowledge from the expedition as an empirical object . . . . .	373
25.5. References. . . . .	375
Conclusion . . . . .	377
Gilles GAREL, Monique AUBRY and Pascal LIÈVRE
