
Contents

Foreword	ix
Introduction	xv
Chapter 1. How Do the Economy and the Press Influence Each Other?	1
1.1. The concept of media	1
1.2. The concept of information	3
1.3. The economy	7
1.4. A brief history of the media and press economy	7
1.4.1. The discreet beginnings of the media economy	8
1.4.2. The renewal of the media economy since the 2000s	10
1.5. The two “meanings” of media economics	17
1.5.1. Does media have an influence on the economy?	17
1.5.2. Does the economy influence the media sector?	25
1.6. Summary	32
Chapter 2. Can We Trust the Press?	35
2.1. The credibility of media and journalists	35
2.1.1. Distrust of the Internet is growing	36
2.1.2. But criticism of journalists remains strong	37
2.2. Is there an informational or ideological bias in the press?	38
2.2.1. The measurement of an informational bias	38
2.2.2. Tests on U.S. media	44
2.2.3. The case of the Asian and European press	47
2.2.4. The impact of newspaper owners	48
2.2.5. Pluralism and competition.	50
2.3. Summary of challenges	54

Chapter 3. What are the Links between the Press and Politics?	55
3.1. A diminishing influence	58
3.2. The notion of collusion between the media and politicians	60
3.3. Do newspapers run elections?	62
3.4. The importance of press freedom	64
3.5. Differences between local and national press	67
3.5.1. The local press is more influential	67
3.5.2. The Internet confirms this influence	68
3.5.3. The case of Japan	68
Chapter 4. Does the Press Need Advertisers?	71
4.1. Advertising-free newspapers?	73
4.2. Pressure from advertisers and readers	74
4.2.1. When advertisers apply the pressure	74
4.2.2. When readers put pressure on advertising	76
4.3. Can media say everything?	77
4.3.1. Seducing advertisers	77
4.3.2. Can media oppose an advertiser?	81
4.3.3. The impact of taxation	84
Chapter 5. Is the Printed Newspaper Gamble Crazy?	87
5.1. Is it the end of printed papers in the United States?	88
5.1.1. Preparing for a change of era?	89
5.1.2. Digital reading exceeds paper reading	91
5.1.3. Difficult print launches	93
5.2. Among pure players: the free model is crumbling	95
5.3. The online press mainly chooses the paid model	97
5.4. Managing the model change	99
5.4.1. Absorbing the negative effects of the Web on print	100
5.4.2. The copy/paste temptation	101
5.5. The press in start-up mode	104
5.5.1. Is the future in code?	104
5.5.2. The hope of finding new resources	106
5.6. Understanding the algorithmic agenda	109
Chapter 6. Are There Dangerous Links between Media and Social Networks?	115
6.1 The indispensable social networks	115
6.1.1. Strategies to take advantage of social networks	117

6.1.2. Media at the mercy of networks	118
6.1.3. The media brand is fading away behind the social network brand.	119
6.1.4. The problem of revenue sharing between media and social networks	120
6.2. The social network eco-system	122
6.2.1. The influence of social networks	122
6.2.2. The way in which we inform ourselves is not unbiased	125
6.2.3. The influence of social networks on decisions.	128
6.3. Social networks are transforming the information business	131
6.3.1. Journalists in networks.	131
6.3.2. The role of social network algorithms.	133
6.3.3. The impact of social network development on the quality of information.	136
Chapter 7. Will Fake News Kill Information?	139
7.1. From media and network initiatives to a law	141
7.2. Fake news and post truth	143
7.2.1. Misinformation circulates very quickly	145
7.2.2. Fake news and social networks.	146
7.3. Why fake news?	149
7.3.1. The impact of fake news and rumors	150
7.3.2. Fact checking versus fake news	152
7.3.3. Bad news.	153
7.3.4. Fake news and economic expectations	154
Chapter 8. Are Robots and AI the Future of the Media?	161
8.1. Robot journalists are already in action	162
8.2. What is artificial intelligence?	164
8.3. Research on automatic journalism	165
8.3.1. From quantitative journalism to robot journalism	166
8.3.2. Do readers and advertisers enjoy articles that have been written automatically?	168
8.3.3. The impact of robotization	168
8.3.4. What do human journalists think about it?	169
8.4. How do these editorial algorithms work?	174
References	179
Index	205