
Contents

Foreword	xi
Bernard REBER
Preamble	xvii
Catherine LOISY and Jean-Claude COULET
Introduction	xix
Catherine LOISY and Jean-Claude COULET
Chapter 1. Program-based Approach, Curriculum and Competency-based Approach: Sense and Nonsense in the Light of Neoliberalism	1
Yves LENOIR
1.1. Introduction.	1
1.2. The program-based approach	2
1.2.1. Its origins and context of its deployment in international assistance.	2
1.2.2. The transfer of the concept to education	5
1.3. The PBA, the course of study and curriculum: differences and similarities	6
1.3.1. The PBA: a rejection of the concept of course of study	6
1.3.2. The PBA and the curriculum	7
1.3.3. Two distinct socio-educational logics	10
1.4. Attributes of the program-based approach.	15
1.4.1. Positive attributes	15
1.4.2. A program-based approach for what school education purposes?	21
1.5. Conclusion	34
1.6. References	36

Chapter 2. Can a Competency-based Curriculum be a Humanistic Curriculum?	57
Xavier ROEGIERS
2.1. Introduction: challenges	57
2.2. Competency: a polysemic term	57
2.3. What is a humanistic curriculum?	59
2.3.1. Empowerment goals	61
2.3.2. Work for common good	63
2.4. What is a humanistic curriculum?	63
2.4.1. Awareness level of school challenges	63
2.4.2. Promotion of citizen awareness, rather than citizen submission	65
2.4.3. Progressive changes rather than radical changes	66
2.4.4. Explicit rather than implicit course of study	66
2.4.5. Choice, implicit or explicit, of graduate attributes	67
2.4.6. Prioritize the issue of meaning	67
2.4.7. Prioritize actions over speeches	68
2.4.8. Being clear with the status of innovations introduced	70
2.4.9. A consistent and long-term evaluation consideration for reform rather than a short-term, diffuse evaluation policy	71
2.5. Can a competency-based curriculum be humanistic?	72
2.5.1. Effectiveness at the benefit of meaning	73
2.5.2. Equity for itself, but also for more efficiency	75
2.5.3. What can be done for a humanistic curriculum?	77
2.6. Conclusion	78
2.7. References	78
Chapter 3. Developing Competencies: Theoretical Detour in Favor of a Humanistic-based Competency Approach	81
Jean-Claude COULET
3.1. Introduction.	81
3.2. A competency model	82
3.2.1. Main limitations of the literature data	82
3.2.2. Presentation of MADDEC	83
3.3. MADDEC's interest in the implementation of a CBA	85
3.3.1. Elucidating the relationships between competencies and knowledge	85
3.3.2. The formalization of competencies	86
3.3.3. Procedures for guiding the development of competencies	90
3.4. Towards the building of a collective competency	93
3.4.1. Implementation of the CBA: a productive activity	94
3.4.2. Implementation of the CBA: a constructive activity	96
3.5. Conclusion	96
3.6. References	97

Chapter 4. A Developmental Perspective of Competency Assessment	101
Christian CHAUVIGNÉ
4.1. Introduction.	101
4.2. Competency: an assessment object that is difficult to grasp	102
4.2.1. Convergence in the concepts of competency.	102
4.2.2. Scheme as a model of intelligibility	103
4.2.3. Competency: its properties and resources	104
4.2.4. Subtle assessment of an elusive and changing object	105
4.3. The need for a reference system characterized by its incompleteness	106
4.3.1. Identification and description of reference competencies	107
4.3.2. Co-developed reference system	110
4.3.3. Non-exhaustive and scalable reference system	111
4.4. Building a cluster of relevant indicators	112
4.4.1. Observable fields	112
4.4.2. Methodological conjugation	114
4.4.3. Qualitative approach	115
4.5. Adaptability, main focus of competency assessment	116
4.5.1. Adaptability assessment	116
4.5.2. From the analysis of uncertainty to acceptability judgment	117
4.6. Development, challenge and end purpose of assessment	118
4.6.1. Classifying versus dynamic use of value attribution	119
4.6.2. An assessment participating in learning.	120
4.7. Conclusion	121
4.8. References	122
Chapter 5. Anchoring Social and Environmental Responsibilities in Educational and Training Practices	125
Jean-Claude COULET
5.1. Introduction.	125
5.2. Reference theoretical models	128
5.2.1. Need to define the concept of competency	128
5.2.2. Modeling the dynamics of the evolution of competencies within organizations and territories.	134
5.3. Operational tools.	138
5.3.1. Implementing change within the activity of organizations and territories.	138
5.3.2. Initiating change within education and training activities	145
5.4. Conclusion	151
5.5. References	153

Chapter 6. Program-based Approach in Teacher Development Perspective	157
Catherine LOISY
6.1. Introduction.	157
6.2. Implementation of the PBA in France	159
6.2.1. The Bologna process and its translation into French national politics	160
6.2.2. Pedagogical transformation in educational policy discourses	161
6.2.3. DevSup: case study of a training system	163
6.3. Potential learning and development of teachers involved in the PBA clarification based on development theories	167
6.3.1. What do teachers involved in a PBA do?	167
6.3.2. Learning made possible for teachers.	169
6.3.3. Potential development of teachers involved in a PBA	172
6.4. Research watch points and perspectives	176
6.4.1. Watch points.	176
6.4.2. Research perspectives	179
6.5. Conclusion	181
6.6. References	182
Chapter 7. Implementing the Program-based Approach: a Development Perspective of the Quality of University Education	189
Mariane FRENAY, Philippe PARMENTIER, L��ticia WARNIER and Pascale WOUTERS
7.1. Introduction.	189
7.2. PBA at UCL: presentation and context	190
7.2.1. Bologna phase (2004–2010)	191
7.2.2. EQF phase – adoption of the European qualifications framework (2011–2014).	192
7.2.3. “Paysage” decree phase (since 2014)	193
7.3. What institutional levers supported PBA implementation?	194
7.4. Supporting PBA as a strategy for educational development at the institutional level?	197
7.5. PBA involved in the current trends of curriculum models?	198
7.6. The Louvain-Laval Collaborative Research Project on PBA, or how to view the project through a sustainability perspective	199
7.7. Conclusion	201
7.8. References	202

Chapter 8. Benchmarks for Operationalizing Program-based and Competency-based Approaches in Universities	205
Catherine LOISY, Émilie CAROSIN and Jean-Claude COULET
8.1. Introduction.	205
8.2. Benchmarking between program-based and competency-based approaches	206
8.2.1. Transition to an articulation between program-based and competency-based approaches	207
8.2.2. Some pitfalls to be avoided	211
8.3. Articulating program-based and competency-based approaches from the diachronic perspective of competency	213
8.3.1. Targeted, effective and explicated competencies	214
8.3.2. The backbone of the articulation between program-based and competency-based approaches	220
8.4. General approach to be implemented.	222
8.5. References	223
Conclusion	227
Catherine LOISY and Jean-Claude COULET
Postface	233
Jean-Paul BRONCKART
List of Authors	249
Index	251