

Table of Contents

Introduction	ix
Chapter 1. The American Territory	1
1.1. A continent-nation with a dispersed population	1
1.2. Major geographical areas.	5
1.3. Unfavorable climatic factors.	9
1.4. Physical geography of the US	17
Chapter 2. Developing the Territory	23
2.1. Agricultural regions	23
2.2. An agriculture which does not influence settlement	29
2.3. The abundance and limits of natural resources	33
2.4. Working towards the sustainable management of the American forest	33
2.5. Fossil resources-abundance and dependence	36
2.6. The case of fossil fuels	37
2.6.1. The world's second largest producer of coal	37
2.6.2. Oil – a strategic dilemma	40
2.6.3. Natural gas – a highly desirable resource	44
2.7. Environmental protection	46

Chapter 3. A Rapidly Growing Population	49
3.1. A relatively high fertility rate due to immigration	50
3.2. Life expectancy and aging	51
3.3. Aging – regional disparities	53
3.4. Immigration to the United States of America	54
3.5. The country’s gateways.	58
Chapter 4. A Multi-ethnic Nation	63
4.1. Native peoples	64
4.2. A nation of immigrants	66
4.3. The African-American question.	68
4.4. America and Mexico	76
4.5. Geography of the population of Asian origin	82
Chapter 5. Regional Dynamics	85
5.1. Main features of settlement in the US territory	89
5.1.1. The United States in 1930	90
5.1.2. America in 1970.	91
5.1.3. The United States in 2005	93
5.2. The dynamics of regional settlement between 1930 and 2005	95
Chapter 6. Economic Change and Territories	99
6.1. A changing economy	99
6.2. Economic growth	102
6.3. Industrial change.	105
6.4. A population on the move	108
6.5. Migration of retired populations	117
Chapter 7. A Suburban Nation	119
7.1. Urban sprawl	121
7.2. Big cities	126
7.3. Consequences of urban sprawl on sustainable development	131
7.4. Urban sprawl is not only a big city phenomenon.	133

Chapter 8. Urban Fragmentation and Sprawl	137
8.1. Social divisions find expression in land use patterns	137
8.1.1. Atlanta	138
8.1.2. Detroit	148
8.1.3. Houston.	156
8.1.4. Portland.	165
8.2. The challenge of governance in fragmented metropolitan areas	171
8.3. The crisis of cities	174
Chapter 9. New Orleans in Dangerous Waters	177
9.1. The physical components of natural hazards	178
9.2. Increased vulnerability from urban sprawl	184
9.3. The consequences of a natural disaster.	195
Conclusion	203
Glossary	211
References	239
List of Tables and Figures	245
Index	251