
Contents

| | |
|---|------|
| Foreword | ix |
| Introduction | xvii |
| Chapter 1. The World as a Reflection of the Mind | 1 |
| 1.1. Definitions of the terms. | 1 |
| 1.1.1. Notions of world | 1 |
| 1.1.2. Notions of mind. | 5 |
| 1.1.3. Gnoseological hypothesis, notions of consciousness and the model of the mind | 6 |
| 1.2. The objective world as an epistemological and societal reflection of the collective mind: an example of science | 17 |
| 1.2.1. Paradigms and projections in science | 18 |
| 1.2.2. Examples of projection by a collective mind onto the objective world | 20 |
| 1.2.3. Overview: the scientific world, a reflection of scientists' minds | 24 |
| 1.3. The subjective world as a psychological and phenomenological reflection of the individual mind. | 25 |
| 1.3.1. The basic mechanisms of the world-mind relationship. | 25 |
| 1.3.2. The four horsemen of the individual relative mind | 38 |
| 1.4. Integrating the model of the relationship between the relative world and the mind. | 83 |
| 1.4.1. Metaphysics of the strawberry tartlet | 84 |
| 1.4.2. The ego, mediator of the reflection of the subjective world through the individual relative mind | 89 |
| 1.4.3. An example: stereotypes, prejudices and violent radicalizations . . . | 94 |

| | |
|--|-----|
| Chapter 2. Responsibility and Functioning of the Mind | 103 |
| 2.1. Introduction: an overview of the tone of current research on responsibility | 103 |
| 2.2. Responsibility as a dialogical relationship between the outer and inner worlds: ethical perspectives | 105 |
| 2.2.1. Problem of responsibility in the field of ethics. | 105 |
| 2.2.2. Responsibility approaches in the field of ethics | 108 |
| 2.3. Responsibility as a consciousness connected to oneself, others and the non-human environment (NHE): psychological and phenomenological points of view | 110 |
| 2.3.1. Cognition and responsibility | 110 |
| 2.3.2. Orientation and responsibility | 117 |
| 2.3.3. Emotions, relationships and responsibility | 123 |
| 2.4. Assessment: criteria for guiding towards responsibility | 127 |
| 2.4.1. Coherence | 128 |
| 2.4.2. The motivation for innovation | 130 |
| 2.4.3. Harmony | 134 |
| 2.4.4. Horizon of an education for responsibility | 147 |
| | |
| Chapter 3. Education for Responsibility Guidelines | 161 |
| 3.1. Reflexivities | 161 |
| 3.1.1. Cognitive reflexivity | 162 |
| 3.1.2. Dialogical reflexivity. | 164 |
| 3.1.3. Phenomenological reflexivity. | 166 |
| 3.1.4. Objectives and material for the implementation of these reflexivities | 169 |
| 3.2. Meditation | 174 |
| 3.2.1. Meditation and its phenomenological effects | 174 |
| 3.2.2. Clinical protocols and practices including meditation | 180 |
| 3.2.3. Techniques related to meditation. | 183 |
| 3.2.4. Psychobiological effects of meditation | 184 |
| 3.2.5. Effects of meditation in school and university contexts | 191 |
| 3.3. General principle: reflexivities, meditation and responsibility | 193 |
| 3.3.1. Meditation and dialogical reflexivity would synergistically promote phenomenological reflexivity | 193 |
| 3.3.2. Phenomenological reflexivity promotes empathy and relatedness by instantiating harmony | 197 |
| 3.4. Summary of the competences targeted in responsibility education | 203 |
| 3.4.1. Notion of competence | 204 |
| 3.4.2. Emotional competences | 206 |
| 3.4.3. Epistemic competences | 209 |
| 3.4.4. Attentional competences. | 211 |

| | |
|---|------------|
| 3.4.5. Relational competences | 213 |
| 3.4.6. Axiological competences | 214 |
| 3.4.7. Summary of the progress within the five types of competences | 219 |
| 3.5. Integrating model of psychospiritual competences targeted in education for responsibility | 224 |
| Chapter 4. Discussion | 229 |
| 4.1. Education for responsibility, ethics and spirituality | 230 |
| 4.2. Limitations of this approach | 232 |
| 4.2.1. Obstacles in the French context | 232 |
| 4.2.2. Some limitations of the proposed model | 235 |
| 4.3. Education for responsibility and happiness | 237 |
| 4.3.1. Stopping the illusion of ego and lasting happiness | 238 |
| 4.3.2. Connections between education for responsibility and positive psychology | 241 |
| 4.4. Building knowledge and practical implementation in education for responsibility | 245 |
| 4.4.1. Summary of the present argumentation | 245 |
| 4.4.2. Epistemological, pedagogical and research perspectives. | 248 |
| 4.4.3. Afterword | 254 |
| Postface | 257 |
| References | 261 |
| Index | 289 |