

Contents

Introduction	xi
Jean MERCIER YTHIER
Part 1. Normative Political Economy: Between Economic Reason and Political Reason	1
Chapter 1. The “Difference Principle”: Economic Rationality and Political Applicability	3
Claude GAMEL
1.1. Introduction: equality norms and the “difference principle” in the public debate	3
1.1.1. Deliberation in public debate	3
1.1.2. The equality standard in evaluating inequalities	5
1.1.3. The singularity of the “difference principle”	7
1.2. Rationality: from philosophical objection to economic translation	10
1.2.1. The philosophical objection rather well overcome	10
1.2.2. An economic translation still under debate	13
1.3. Applicability: from political misunderstanding to societal complexity	19
1.3.1. The political misunderstanding to be cleared up	19
1.3.2. The societal complexity to be absorbed	26
1.4. Conclusion: a principle that is less philosophical than economic	30
1.5. References	31

Chapter 2. The Public Sphere Between the State and the Market: From Rational Discussion to the Information and Communication Society	35
Sylvain LAVELLE
2.1. Publicity before and after Habermas	35
2.2. The public sphere between the State and the market.	38
2.2.1. The origin of the concept in the public sphere	39
2.2.2. The public sphere and the systems of the State and the market.	41
2.2.3. The development of the concept of the public sphere in Between Facts and Norms	42
2.2.4. The multiple dimensions of the public sphere	45
2.3. The public sphere and rational discussion	48
2.3.1. The rational discussion model	48
2.3.2. The political ideal put to the test of reality	50
2.3.3. The critique of reason and discourse.	52
2.3.4. The critique of margin and class	56
2.4. The public sphere and the information and communication society	60
2.4.1. The challenges of the information and communication society	60
2.4.2. The public sphere of the media	61
2.4.3. The public sphere in the age of the Internet and globalization.	63
2.4.4. The public sphere of the information and communication society	66
2.5. The idea of the political sphere	68
2.5.1. Beyond procedural policy	68
2.5.2. A paradigm shift	70
2.5.3. From the public sphere to the political sphere	73
2.5.4. The political sphere between the State, the market and society	75
2.6. The dialectics of publicity	76
2.7. References	79
Chapter 3. Contracts Rather than Deliberation: Robert Sugden's Normative Economics	85
Bertrand CRETTEZ
3.1. Introduction.	85
3.2. Sugden's public reasoning approach	86

3.3. The contractarian point of view: principles	88
3.4. The psychological stability of the market from a contractarian perspective.	92
3.5. Discussion of the hypotheses	96
3.6. Making the market more moral	98
3.7. An assessment of the principle of mutual benefit	102
3.8. Conclusion	104
3.9. Acknowledgments.	106
3.10. References.	107
Chapter 4. From a Hegelian to a Smithian Reading of Rawls	109
Ragip EGE and Herrade ITERSHEIM
4.1. Introduction.	109
4.2. Hegel and the reasonable/rational duo	114
4.3. The Smithian impartial spectator: a conceptual trio	123
4.4. Conclusion	127
4.5. References	128
Part 2. Reasons and Persons	131
Chapter 5. Personal Identity, Public Deliberation and Behavioral Public Policy	133
Cyril HÉDOIN
5.1. Introduction.	133
5.2. Behavioral public policy and paternalism	135
5.3. Normative behavioral economics, welfare and identity	139
5.4. Personal identity and the plurality of conceptions of the good.	144
5.5. Public deliberation and justification of behavioral public policies	148
5.6. Conclusion	154
5.7. Acknowledgments.	155
5.8. References	155
Chapter 6. Preferential Choice, Logical Action and Communication Ethics	159
Jean MERCIER YTHIER
6.1. Preferential choice and logical action	159

6.2. Practical choice: logical form and phenomenological substance of the preferential choice	163
6.3. Preferential choice and the axioms of rational choice: logical analysis	166
6.4. Deliberate choice as rational preferential choice: logical reconstruction and evaluation	170
6.4.1. Robustness: reflexivity, binarity and acyclicity of the preference relation	172
6.4.2. Accuracy: completeness of the preference relation	183
6.4.3. Transparency: transitivity of the preference relation	194
6.5. A tentative conclusion on epistemology and ethics	196
6.6. Appendix	198
6.7. References	203
Part 3. Public Debate and Public Policy	207
Chapter 7. Issues of “Stakeholder” Recognition in Collaborative Deliberation	209
Emmanuel PICAUVET
7.1. Introduction.	209
7.2. Authority and recognition of contributions	210
7.2.1. Public and private.	210
7.2.2. Reciprocal support of actors, recognition and collective initiative	213
7.2.3. Structure of action and structure of its environment.	216
7.3. The organization’s environment and stakeholders	218
7.3.1. Descriptive choices	218
7.3.2. Contributions of the “stakeholder” approach.	219
7.3.3. Endogeneity, exogeneity and power in the commitments of an organization.	221
7.4. Conclusion	223
7.5. References	225
Chapter 8. Rethinking the Social Contract in the Digital Age	227
Bruno DEFFAINS
8.1. Introduction.	227
8.2. Toward the questioning of the social contract	232
8.2.1. An economic model in question	234

8.2.2. Increasing inequality	235
8.2.3. The end of homo economicus ?	236
8.2.4. Attention as a scarce resource.	237
8.2.5. The principle of intensity and voluntary servitude.	238
8.3. An explosive cocktail!	242
8.4. Re-founding the social contract	244
8.4.1. A look back at “liberating science”	245
8.4.2. Revisiting the human-machine relationship	248
8.4.3. Digital ontology and ethics	251
8.5. Individual responsibility and collective solidarity	254
8.6. Acknowledgments.	256
8.7. References	256

Chapter 9. Public Management of Rivers: The Deliberative Test . . . 259

Julie RIEGEL

9.1. Introduction.	259
9.2. Voluntary consultations, between desires and fears of dialog	261
9.2.1. Gaining residents’ acceptance of the projects	261
9.2.2. The moderators of the consultations: a regime of sharing rather than opinion	263
9.3. Contrasting memories and effects of the consultation	266
9.3.1. “We were listened to. We were able to talk”	266
9.3.2. A bitter memory of the consultation and unresolved management actions	269
9.4. Framing the consultation and developing scales	272
9.4.1. The status of expertise: determining or supporting the discussion	272
9.4.2. Normativity and scales of general interest in consultations	274
9.5. Conclusion	277
9.6. References	278

Chapter 10. The Economics of Biodiversity and Ecosystem Services between Monetary Valuation and Deliberation 283

Franck-Dominique VIVIEN

10.1. The economy at the service of nature conservation?	284
10.1.1. Is nature irreplaceable?	284
10.1.2. What is the cost of biodiversity erosion?	286
10.1.3. Continuing the debate on sustainability around ecosystem services	290

10.2. An overview of the controversy surrounding the economic value of nature.	292
10.2.1. The standard economic approach and the issue of undervaluing nature in economic terms.	292
10.2.2. The London School: environmental pragmatism.	293
10.2.3. The conventionalist approach	295
10.2.4. Joan Martinez-Alier's ecological socioeconomics: valuation conflicts and incommensurability	298
10.2.5. A research approach: deliberative monetary evaluation.	299
10.3. Conclusion	301
10.4. References.	302
List of Authors	309
Index	311