
Contents

Foreword	xi
Hervé LANOUZIÈRE
Introduction	xvii
Christelle BRUYÈRE
Part 1. A Committed Vision of Caring Management	1
Introduction to Part 1.	3
Chapter 1. Caring Management and the Health-care System: The Vision of Two Committed Doctor-managers	5
Carole MURE and Cécile ROMÉYER
1.1. A health-care system that is insufficiently caring toward its staff and users	6
1.1.1. From the training of hospital staff to compartmentalization between different professions	6
1.1.2. The impact of the reforms on the governance and strategy of hospital establishments.	8
1.1.3. A saturated and weakened health-care system	10
1.2. Some ways to make the health system more caring	11
1.2.1. Establishing medical or shared governance between physicians and administrators	12
1.2.2. Developing prevention.	13
1.2.3. Acquiring new skills	15

1.2.4. Intermediate conclusion: a vision of caring management in the health system	16
1.3. The impacts of the health crisis on a caring manner in the health-care system and potential lessons learned	16
1.4. Conclusion	21
1.5. References	21
Chapter 2. Valuing Human Relationships in the Organization of Care: An International Approach.	23
Julia GUDEFIN and André SIMONNET
2.1. The devaluation of the caregiver–patient relationship at the level of the health-care organization: a worldwide observation	25
2.2. An example of a caring organization: medical humanism in Uruguay	27
2.3. The human relationship in health: toward a new indicator of performance of a caring manner in organizations	31
2.3.1. At the level of medical training.	31
2.3.2. At the level of medical practice	32
2.3.3. At the level of the organization of care	32
2.4. Conclusion	35
2.5. References	36
Chapter 3. The Search for a Caring Nature at Work throughout History.	39
Frédéric PELLEGRIN ROMEGGIO
3.1. Management, a recent discipline and function	40
3.1.1. Management.	40
3.1.2. Benevolence and other terms often associated.	40
3.1.3. Work: suffering or a means of personal fulfillment?	41
3.1.4. The “scam” of the etymology of the word “work”?	42
3.1.5. Benevolence at work? From “classic” management to “caring” management	43
3.2. The search for benevolence at work throughout history: representations that evolve over time	43
3.2.1. The historical approach to benevolence.	43
3.2.2. The new management theories: “classical management versus alternative management”	47
3.2.3. Alternative management: various experiences.	48
3.2.4. A quick look at the “liberated enterprise” concept	50
3.3. Is history a perpetual restart?	53

3.4. Conclusion	54
3.5. References	54
Chapter 4. Caring Management: A Lever to Anticipate, Manage and Repair Crises in the Health-Care System? Lessons Learned from the COVID-19 Health Crisis	57
Manel ABDELJALIL-DINÉ, Christelle BRUYÈRE, Nelly MASSARD and Martine SÉVILLE
4.1. Caring management can be a lever for anticipating, managing and repairing crises, but it must assert itself as such	58
4.1.1. Caring management to better anticipate and prevent crises: toward a more strategic caring management?	59
4.1.2. Caring management to manage crises: the need for caring management to be extended to more stakeholders than just employees	62
4.1.3. Caring management in the face of the challenges of crisis recovery	64
4.2. Caring management in the face of the COVID-19 crisis: case studies of health-care institutions in the AURA region (Auvergne-Rhône-Alpes)	65
4.2.1. When caring management deployed in the organization before the crisis promotes resilience and organizational learning to cope: the case of PYA.	66
4.2.2. When caring management based on the goodwill of work groups in normal times is imposed on everyone in times of crisis	70
4.3. Conclusion	73
4.4. References	74
Part 2. Management in the Health Sector: What Feedback Do We Get?	77
Introduction to Part 2.	79
Chapter 5. Between Illusion and Disillusionment: A Critical View by a Work Sociologist	81
Marc BERNAUD and Marie-Cécile LEGAY
5.1. The contradictions of modern management	82
5.1.1. A desire to break with Taylorism	82
5.1.2. The illusion of a break with Taylorism	85

5.2. Consultants to the “rescue” of management.	87
5.2.1. Consultants at the service of sponsors.	87
5.2.2. The effects of permanent change.	89
5.3. Conclusion	91
5.4. References	92
Chapter 6. Implementation of an Innovative Project in a Nursing Home as a Catalyst for Managerial Innovation	95
Nelly MASSARD and Florence VICHÉ
6.1. Context, questions and conceptual framework	96
6.1.1. Managerial innovation	96
6.1.2. From collaboration to collaborative work	97
6.1.3. The role of the liberating leader	98
6.2. Levers to put the actors in a collaborative working mode	98
6.2.1. An organization to be built	99
6.2.2. A convinced director who is consistent in her vision and her actions	100
6.2.3. Management based on trust and the principle of subsidiarity	100
6.2.4. Collaborative work situations.	101
6.3. An innovative project as a catalyst for managerial innovation: the 4M project, “Mixons Moins, Mangez Mieux”.	102
6.4. Discussion, putting into perspective	104
6.4.1. Management promotes the implementation of novelty in the organization	105
6.4.2. The innovative project as a catalyst for new management practices	106
6.5. The PYA nursing home and crisis management during COVID-19. . .	108
6.5.1. A trained and “muscular”, therefore resilient, team.	108
6.5.2. Being in project mode despite the crisis: getting up and being ready	109
6.5.3. A director supported by her team and a stronger sense of work. . .	110
6.6. Conclusion	110
6.7. References	111
Chapter 7. The Determinants of Happiness in the Workplace for Health-care Workers.	113
Vanessa FAZAL, Virginie MOISSON and Pascal MOULETTE
7.1. Presentation of the empirical study	115
7.2. Analysis of the results.	117

7.3. Discussion of the results and impacts on the managerial function. . . .	121
7.4. References	124
Chapter 8. Management and Benevolence: How Can Managerial Action in the Development of Health Teams be Supported?	127
Annie DEBARD
8.1. Limits of a risk-based approach to work: links between managerial action and team health	128
8.2. Engineering spaces for discussion and decision-making on work: the example of an intervention in a nursing home undergoing restructuring	130
8.3. Evaluation of the process and discussion	134
8.4. Conclusion	138
8.5. References	139
Part 3. Let Us Take a Look Elsewhere: What Do Other Sectors of Activity Say?	141
Introduction to Part 3.	143
Chapter 9. Caring Management: What are the Experiments in the Auvergne-Rhône-Alpes Region?	145
Manel ABDELJALIL-DINÉ, Sébastien DINÉ and François JUTRAS
9.1. The quality of the dialog	146
9.1.1. An attempt at dialog on the notion of performance to overcome sterile representations.	146
9.1.2. Performance: a common concern?	148
9.2. The methodological deficit.	150
9.2.1. Untapped opportunities to link S/QLW and performance	150
9.2.2. The need for dialog engineering	152
9.3. The decision to change	155
9.3.1. The case of exemplary change management, or almost...	155
9.3.2. When resistance to change comes from... management	158
9.4. Conclusion	159
9.5. References	161

Chapter 10. Caring Management: What is the Impact on Student Performance?	163
Sandrine BROUSSOULOUX and Christelle BRUYÈRE
10.1. The health-promoting school: what is it?	163
10.1.1. Health and education are linked	163
10.1.2. The health-promoting school	165
10.1.3. Presentation of the “wellness for better learning” system	166
10.2. Case study: implementation of ABMA in a school in Saint-Etienne	168
10.2.1. Presentation of the case study	168
10.2.2. Action levers activated by the college	169
10.2.3. Key success factors	172
10.3. Discussion.	173
10.4. References.	175
Chapter 11. Caring Management and Large-scale Distribution: A Happy Marriage?	177
Christelle BRUYÈRE, Sébastien DINÉ, Frédéric PELLEGRIN ROMEGGIO and Philippe RODET
11.1. Caring management in a French retail company	178
11.1.1. Presentation of the case study	178
11.1.2. The system implemented and its effects.	178
11.1.3. The levers and obstacles perceived by field managers	180
11.2. Benevolence at work and the subtle play of hormones.	181
11.2.1. A medical approach to benevolence	181
11.2.2. The nine keys to “caring management” proposed	184
11.3. Discussion and perspective.	187
11.4. References.	189
List of Authors	191
Index	193